What is RPL?

Recognition of prior learning (RPL) involves the assessment of previously unrecognised skills and knowledge that an individual has achieved outside the formal education and training system. RPL assesses this unrecognised learning against the requirements of a qualification. RPL encourages an individual to continue upgrading their skills and knowledge through structured education and training towards formal qualifications and improved employment outcomes.

Tips and hints to help you prepare to get your skills recognised

To have skills formally recognised in the national training system, assessors must make sure you have the skills and knowledge to meet the industry standard. This means you must be involved in a careful and considered process that covers the content of all unit/s or qualification/s you can be recognised for.

Assessment happens in a variety of ways. Being prepared can save you valuable time and make the recognition process stress-free for you.

Here are some tips and hints for you

- Be prepared to talk about your job roles and your work history. Each unit that you are seeking RPL for will have a list of guiding questions to help prepare you for the interview. We encourage you to make some notes and take these into the interview with you.
- You will need to submit your curriculum vitae (CV) or resume to your assessor. Your CV should contain information about where you have worked, either paid or unpaid and what you did there.
- Bring your position description and any performance appraisals you have from any offices/businesses you have worked in.
- Consider the possibilities of having a workplace mentor work with you. Are you in a workplace that is supporting your goal to get qualified? Would you feel comfortable with the assessor contacting your workplace or previous workplaces so your skills can be validated?
- Think about who can confirm your skill level. Think about current or recent supervisors who have seen you work in the past 18 months and will be able to confirm your skills. The assessor will need to contact them. You may also have community contacts or even clients themselves who can vouch for your skill level.
- Collect any certificates from in-house training or formal training you have done in the past.
- Think about the workplace documents that you either produce, process or check. Maybe they can be used to demonstrate your skill level. All certificates and results of assessments that you submit must be certified by a Commissioner of Declarations or a Justice of the Peace.

What will I be expected to do?

1. With some qualifications you may be asked to complete a Self-Assessment Questionnaire relating to the qualification you are seeking. In completing the questionnaire, consider how often you perform the various tasks and the opportunity to provide evidence.

There may be instances where you may have little or no documentary information of industry experience. This is not a barrier to gaining recognition.

There are other ways to prove that you can successfully perform the various tasks. For example:

- the assessor will rely on other staff such as your supervisor to confirm that you can perform the tasks.
- there is also questioning and observations that your assessor can do as well.

The completion of the Self-Assessment Questionnaire will provide you an overview of where your strengths are, relating to your skills and knowledge. This is an important start in the RPL process. If there are areas that you are not strong in, your assessor will suggest unit/s be undertaken in a formal way, i.e. either in a classroom/workshop or online.

2. Meet with your assessor at a mutually convenient time to orientate you into the RPL process. The assessor will arrange a time and place for the professional conversation and provide guidance on the submission of your documentation.

In the professional conversation, you will have the opportunity to discuss and identify your previous experience with the assessor who will understand your industry experience. You will be required to answer industry related questions to identify your current skills. To assist with the responses, sample questions are contained in the respective RPL Candidate's Unit Booklet.

3. Contact your current or recent supervisor/s who have seen you work in the past 18 months and who will be able to confirm your skills and ask them if they would be prepared to sign a report.

Begin to collate your documents that demonstrate that you can perform the various tasks for the units for which you are applying for RPL. Your RPL assessor will be able to give you more guidance on this when you meet him or her.

The documents you submit to your RPL assessor need to be recorded on the RPL Document Register. In some situations it is not possible to supply documents from the workplace due to privacy concerns. In these situations your RPL assessor will sign the RPL Document Register to confirm the confidential documents have been sighted.

When you submit your documentation to your assessor, remember to complete a declaration confirming the work that you submit is entirely yours, except where you have made mention it belongs to someone else.

What will my assessor do?

Your assessor will guide you through each of the steps described above. It is the intention of your assessor to provide you with as much information as possible to make your RPL process as pleasant and hassle free experience as possible.

Your assessor will review the documents you have provided, for example, General Employment Documents, Workplace Documents and Workplace Verification Reports and begin to match up your skills to the unit/s in the qualification. The assessor will also review the responses to the questions that were asked in the professional conversation you had with him or her.

After reviewing all of the evidence your assessor will give you feedback about the RPL for the unit. They will confirm if you were successful or not.

If you were not successful, the assessor MAY ask for supplementary assessment activities to be completed. These supplementary assessment activities could include, for example, the assessor observing you perform various workplace tasks or asking you to complete additional assessment workplace projects.

General Employment Documents

The following list is an example of what you may be able to supply to the assessor:

- brief CV or work history
- position descriptions
- certificates/results of assessment
- details of in-house courses, workshops, seminars, orientation or induction sessions
- references/letters from previous employers/supervisor
